

Terry the Tortoise

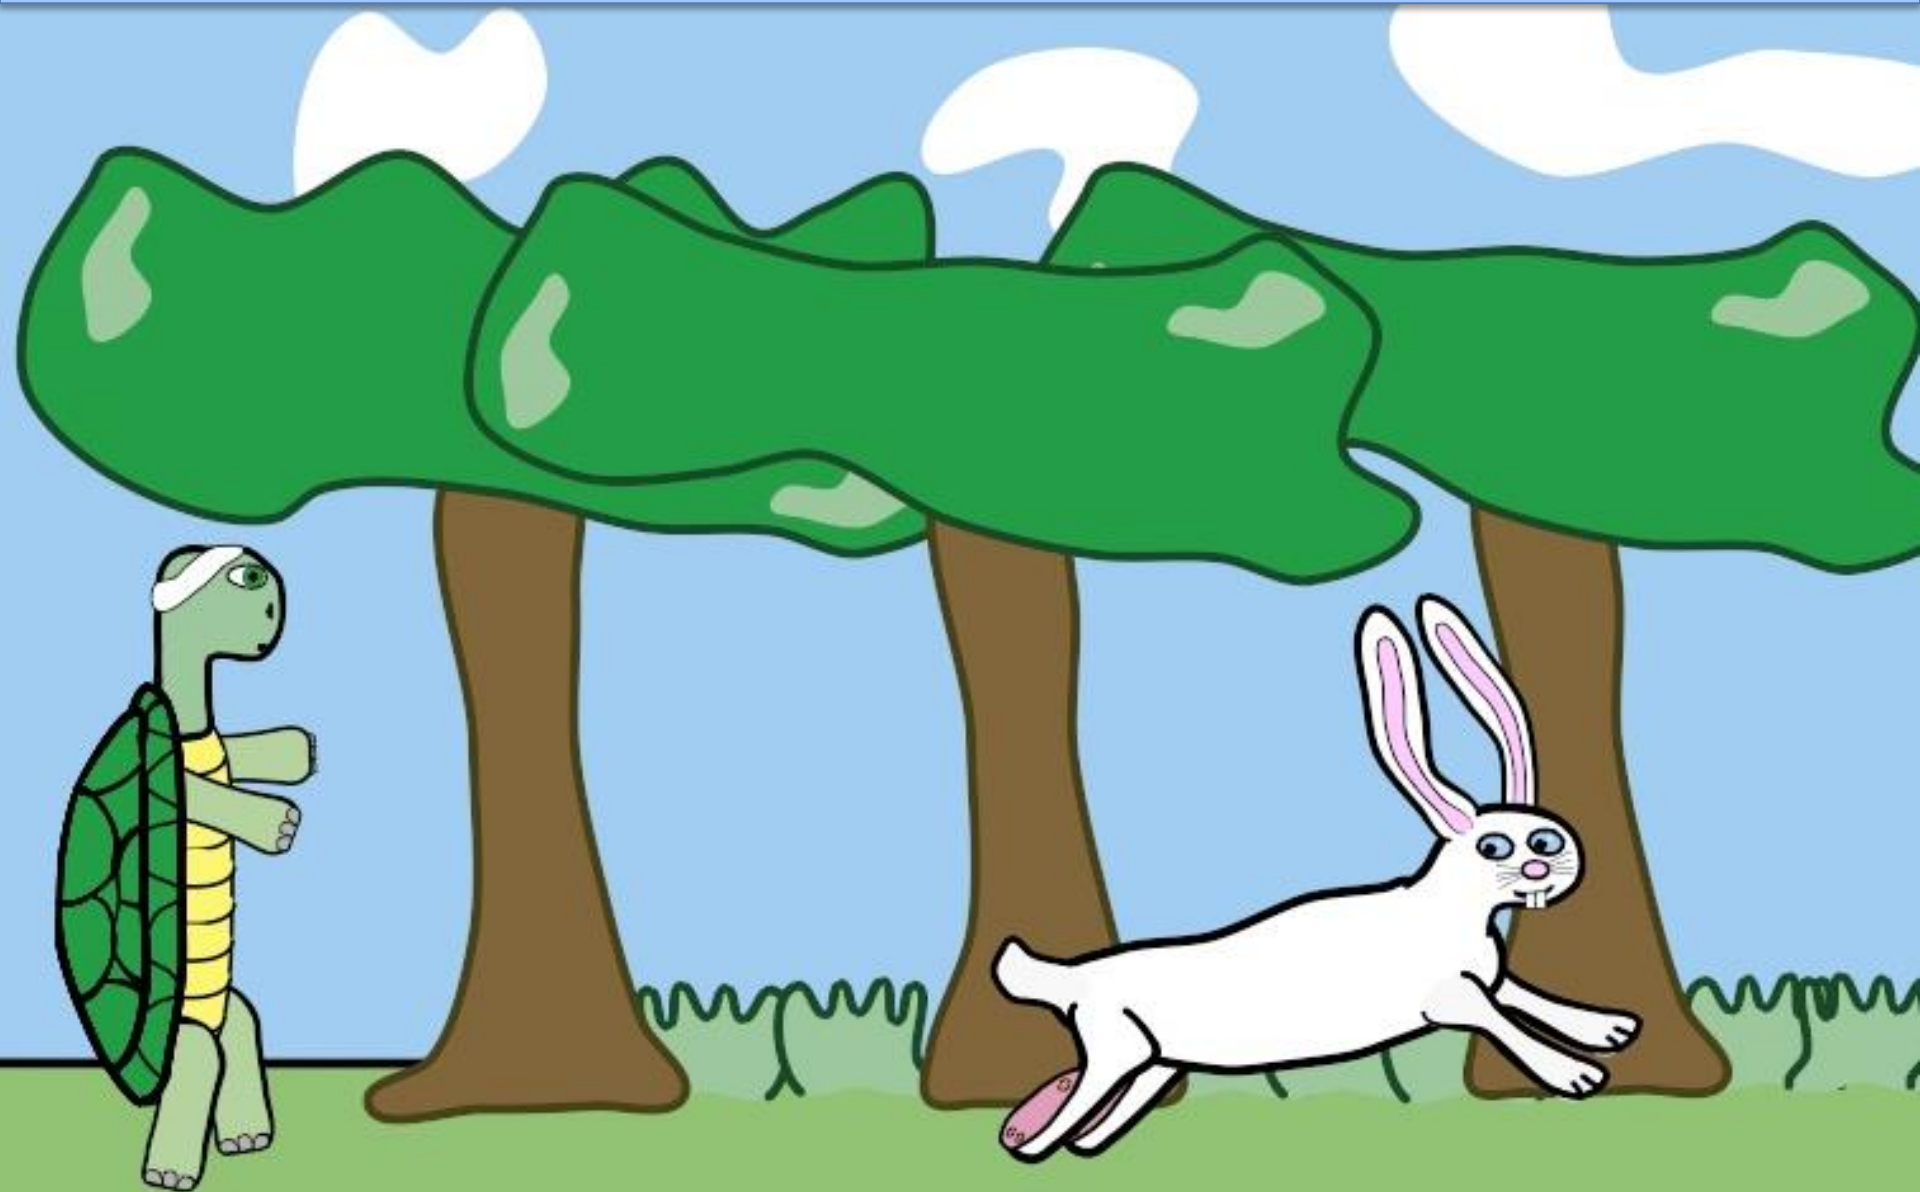

Written and Illustrated by Daniel Rodrigues

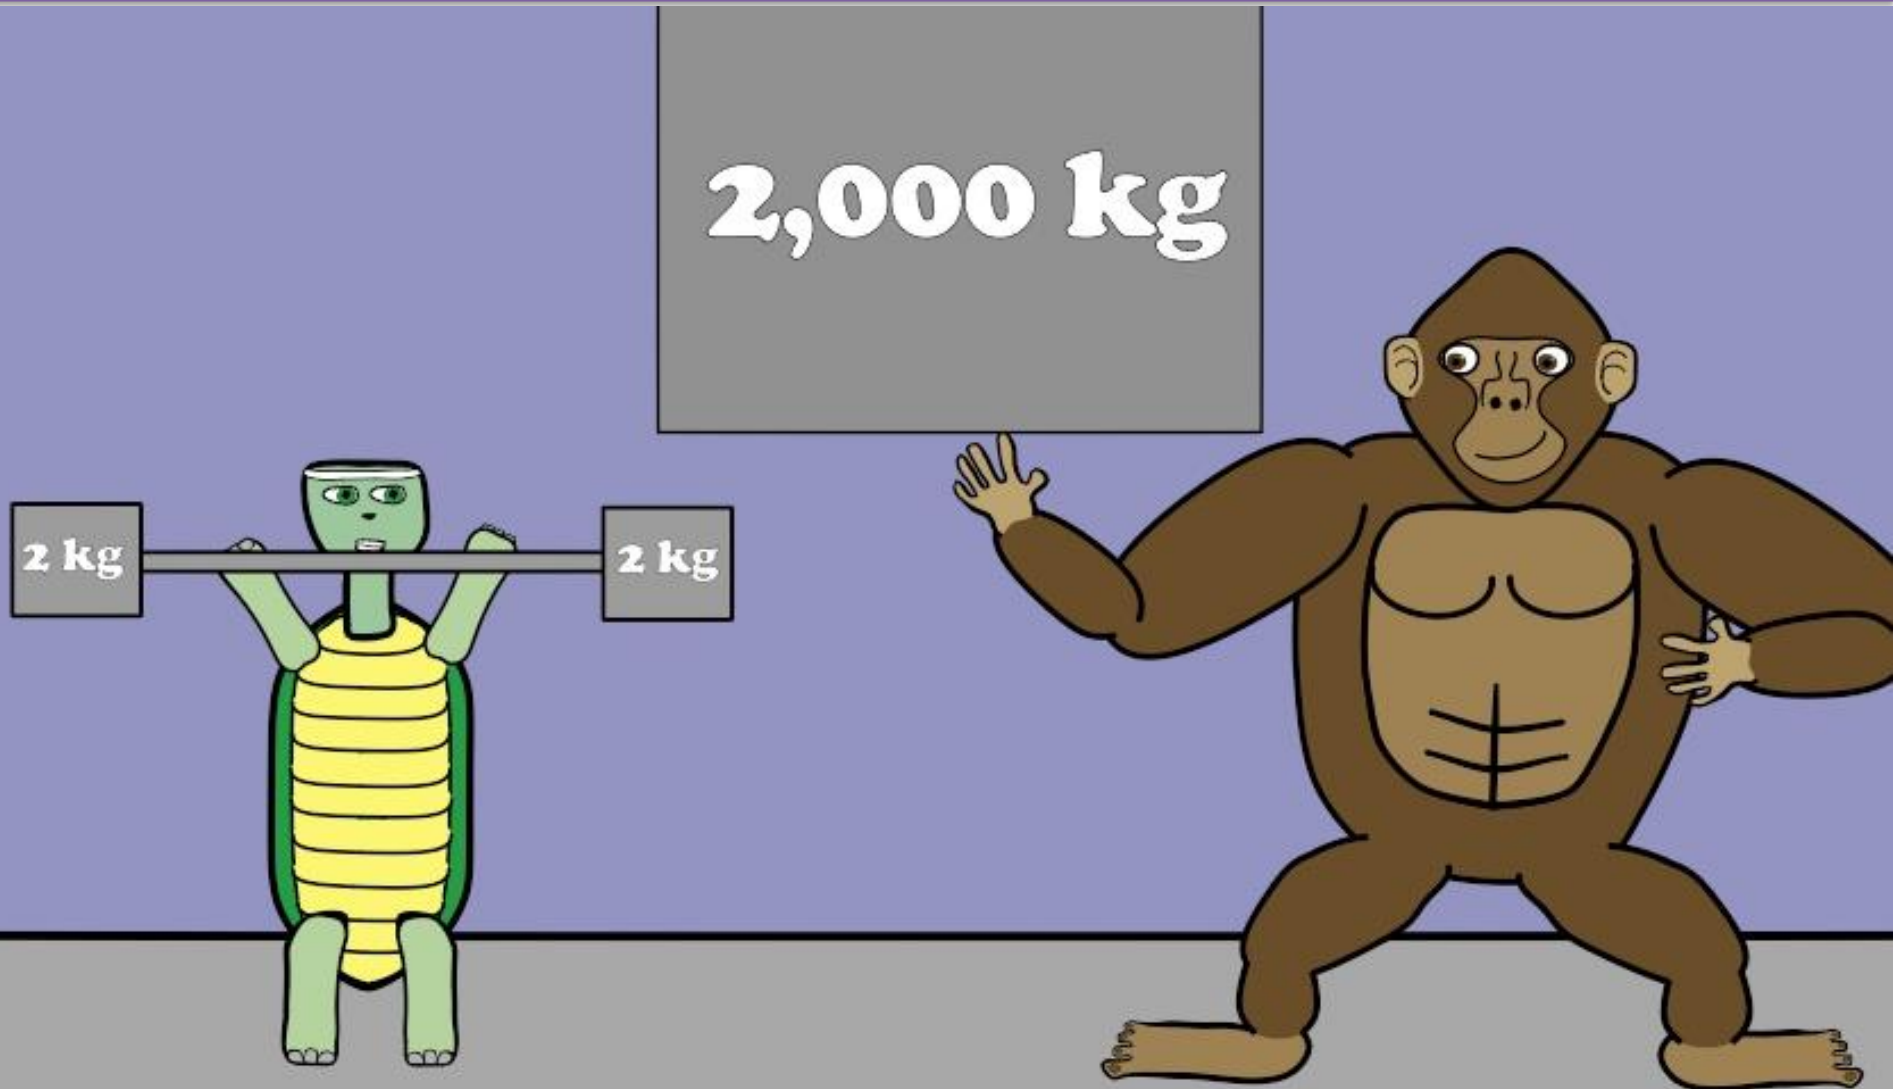

Terry gets up in the morning for the most important game in his life.

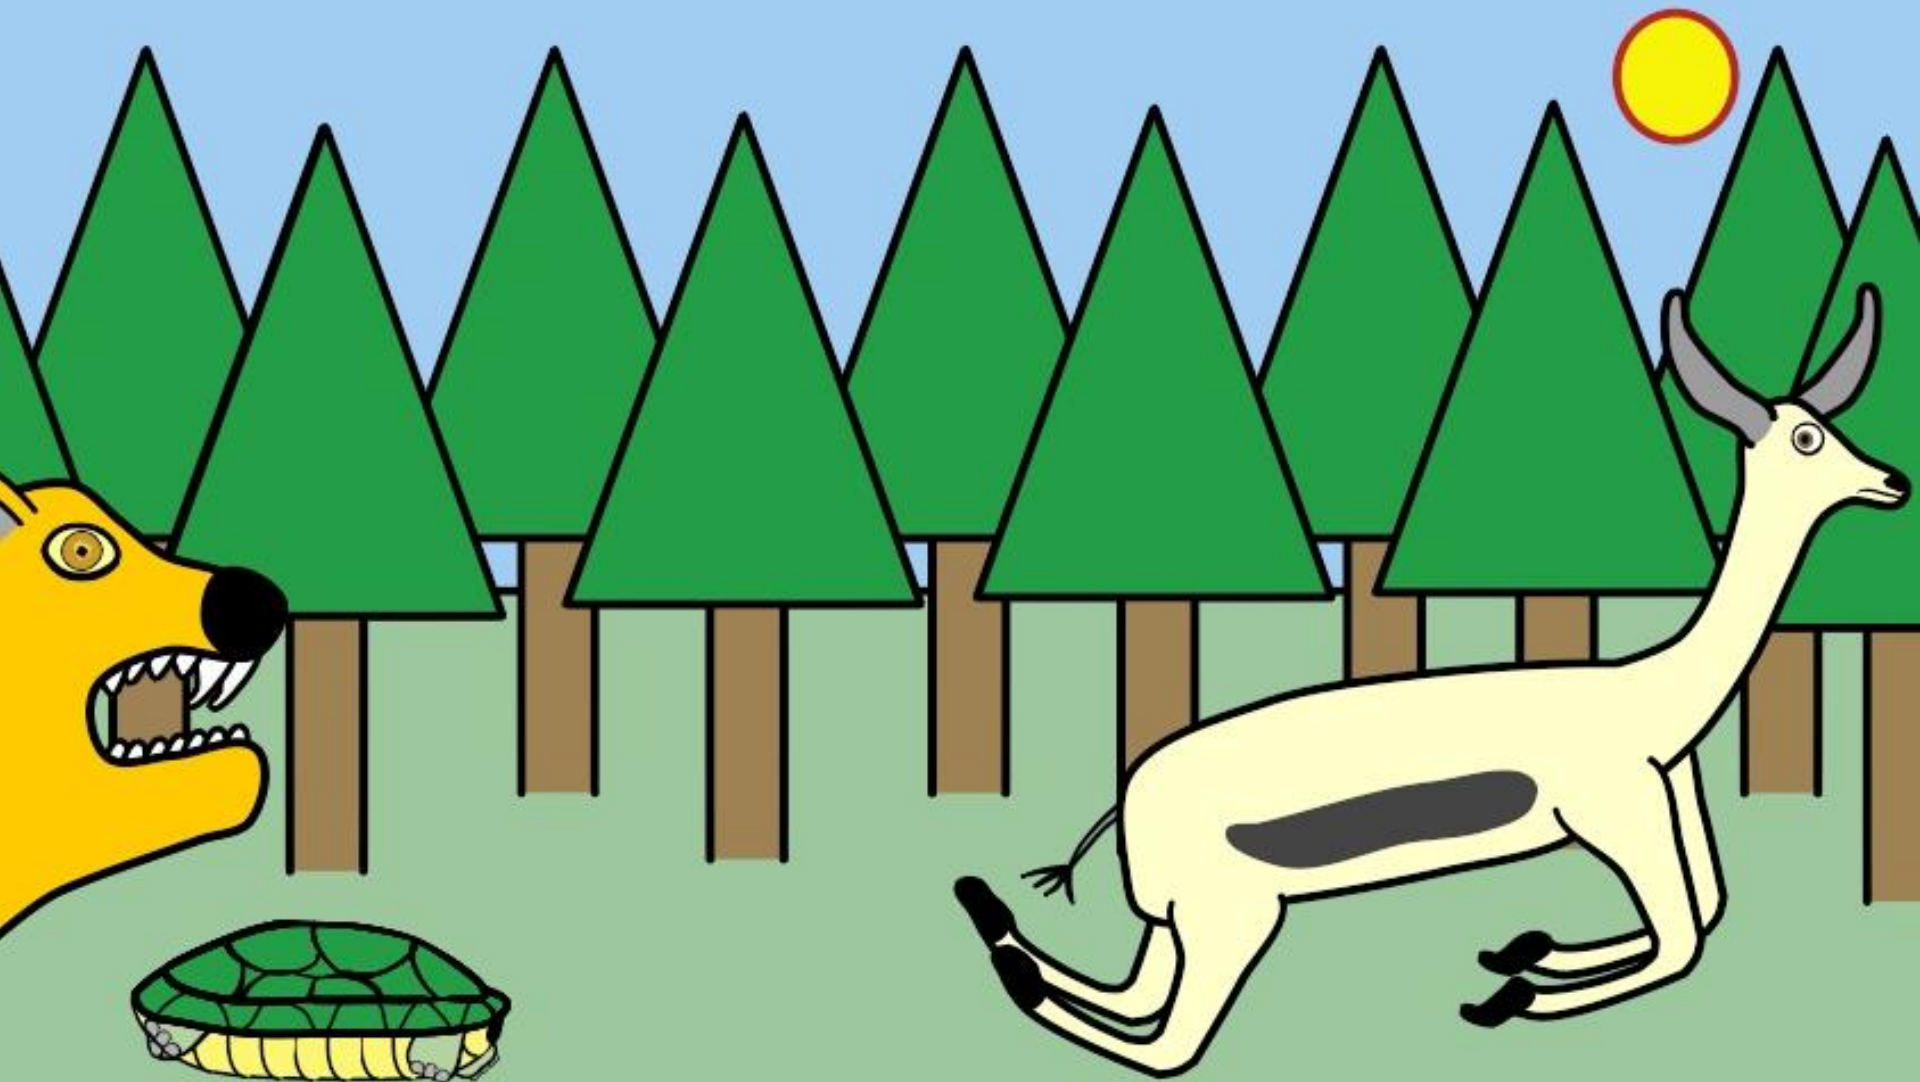

While Terry can't run as fast as Ricardo the Rabbit, he can beat him in the most important race.

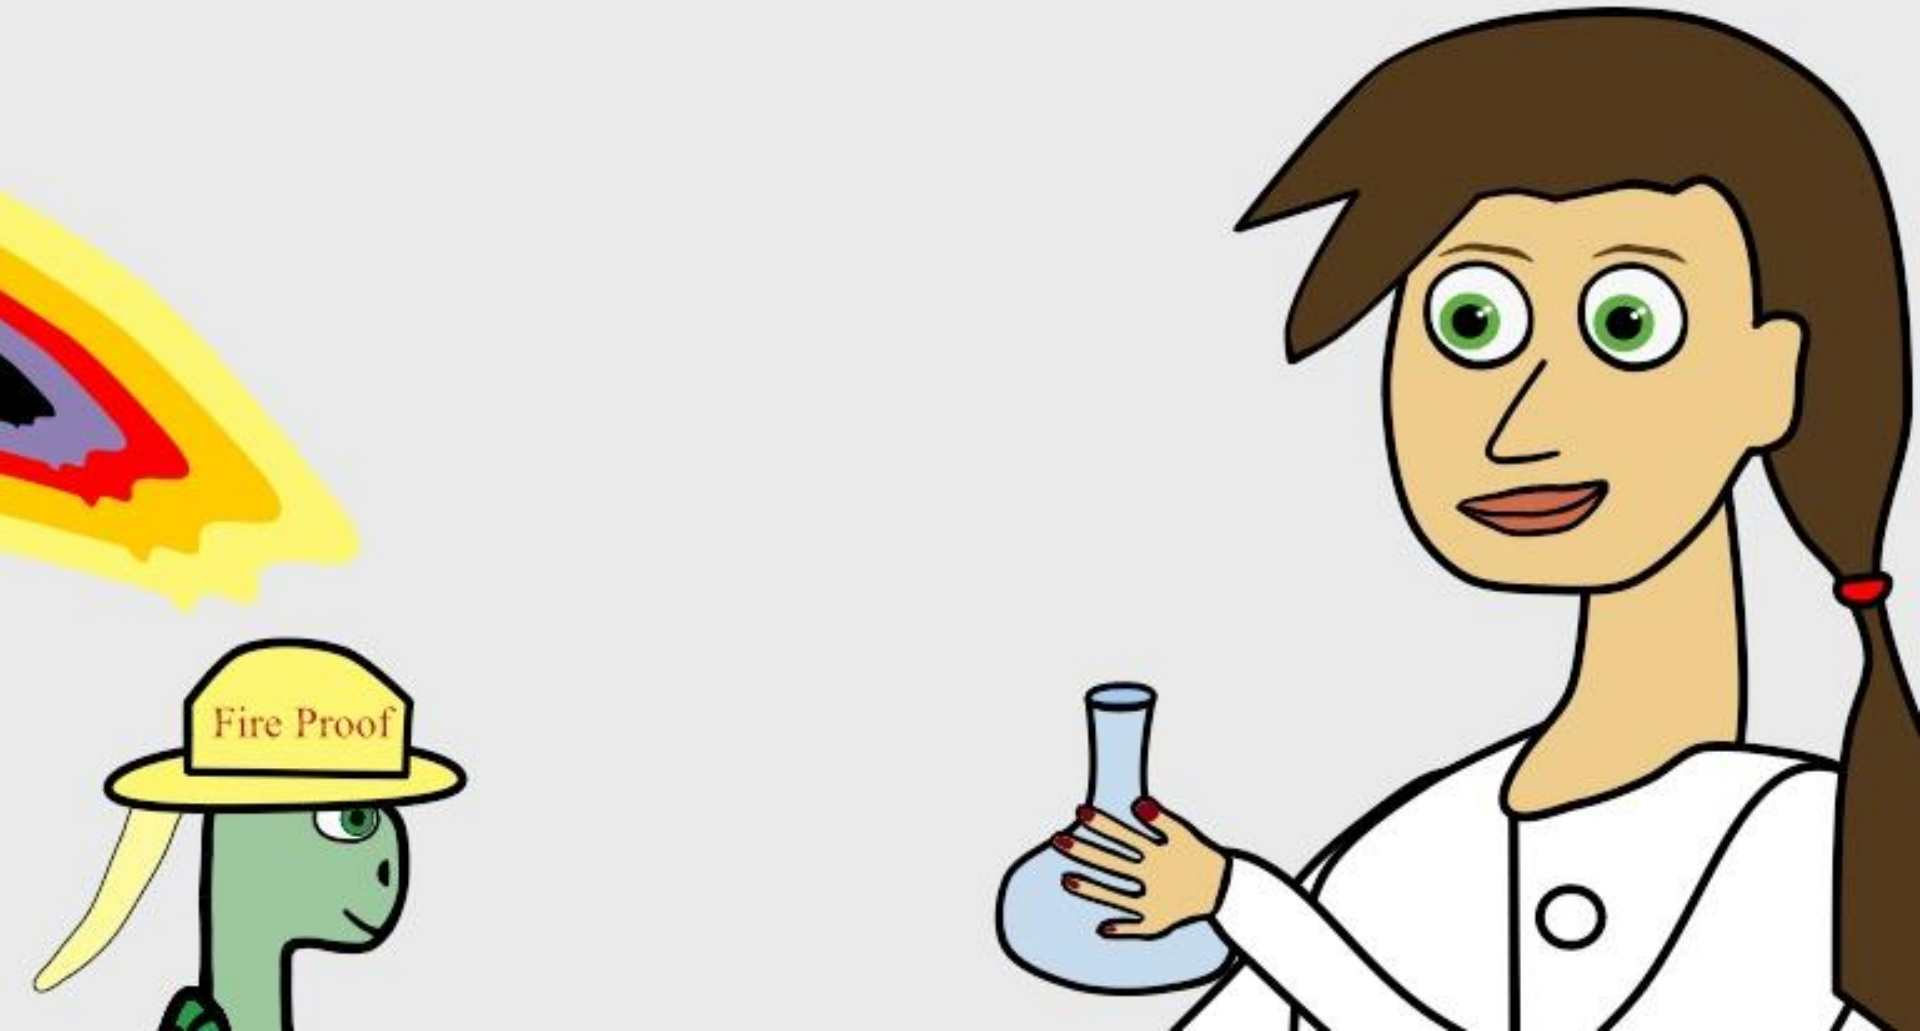

While Terry isn't as strong as Garcia the Gorilla, he can beat him in a particular contest which requires strength.

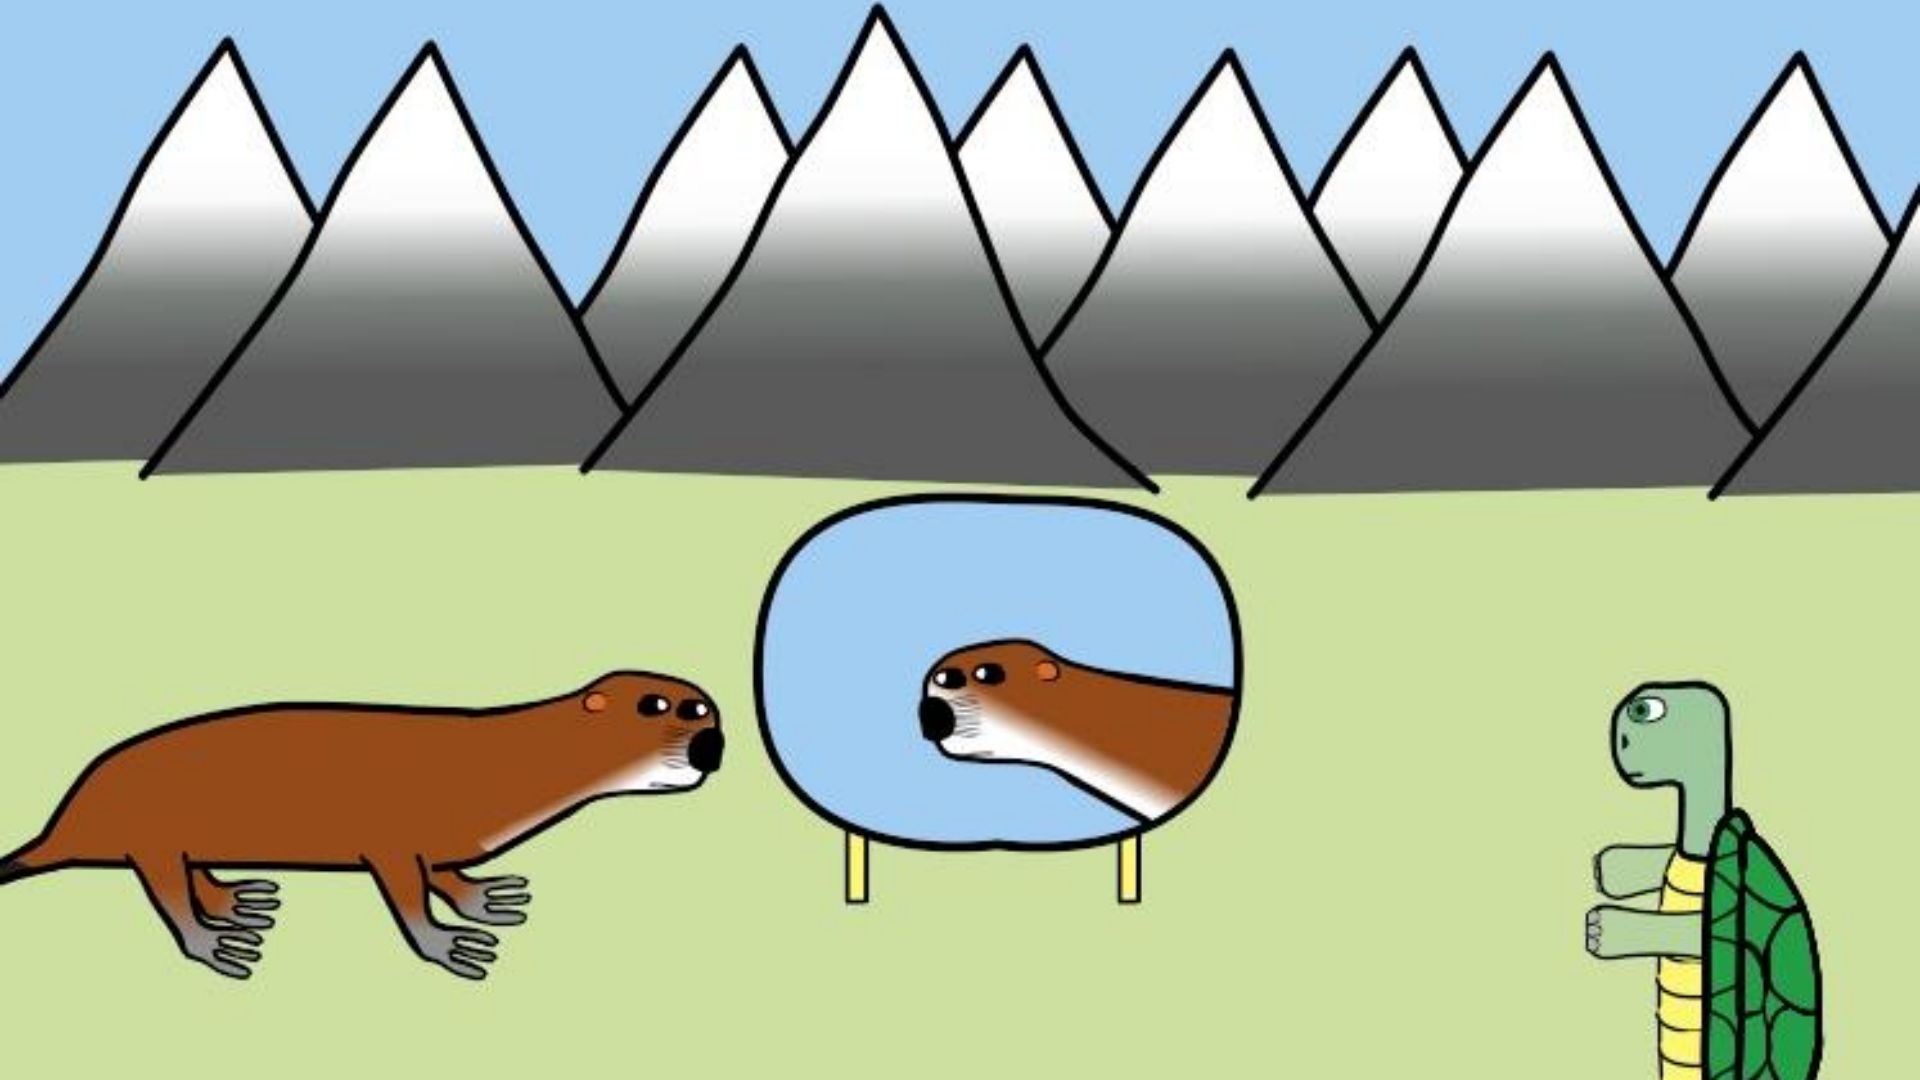

While Terry isn't as agile as Gilbert the Gazelle, his shell can nevertheless outmanoeuvre the deadliest of creatures.

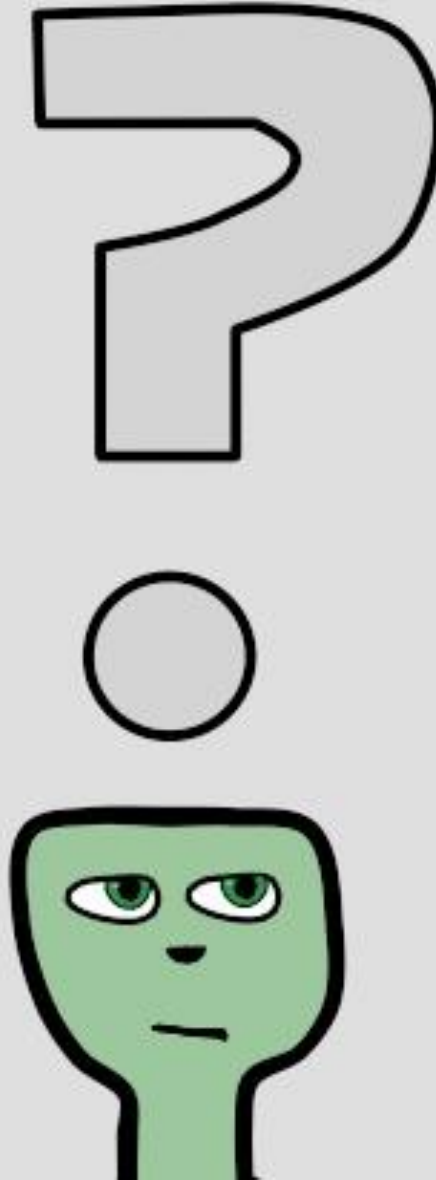

While Terry isn't as smart as Sandra the Scientist. His instincts help him survive the toughest conditions.

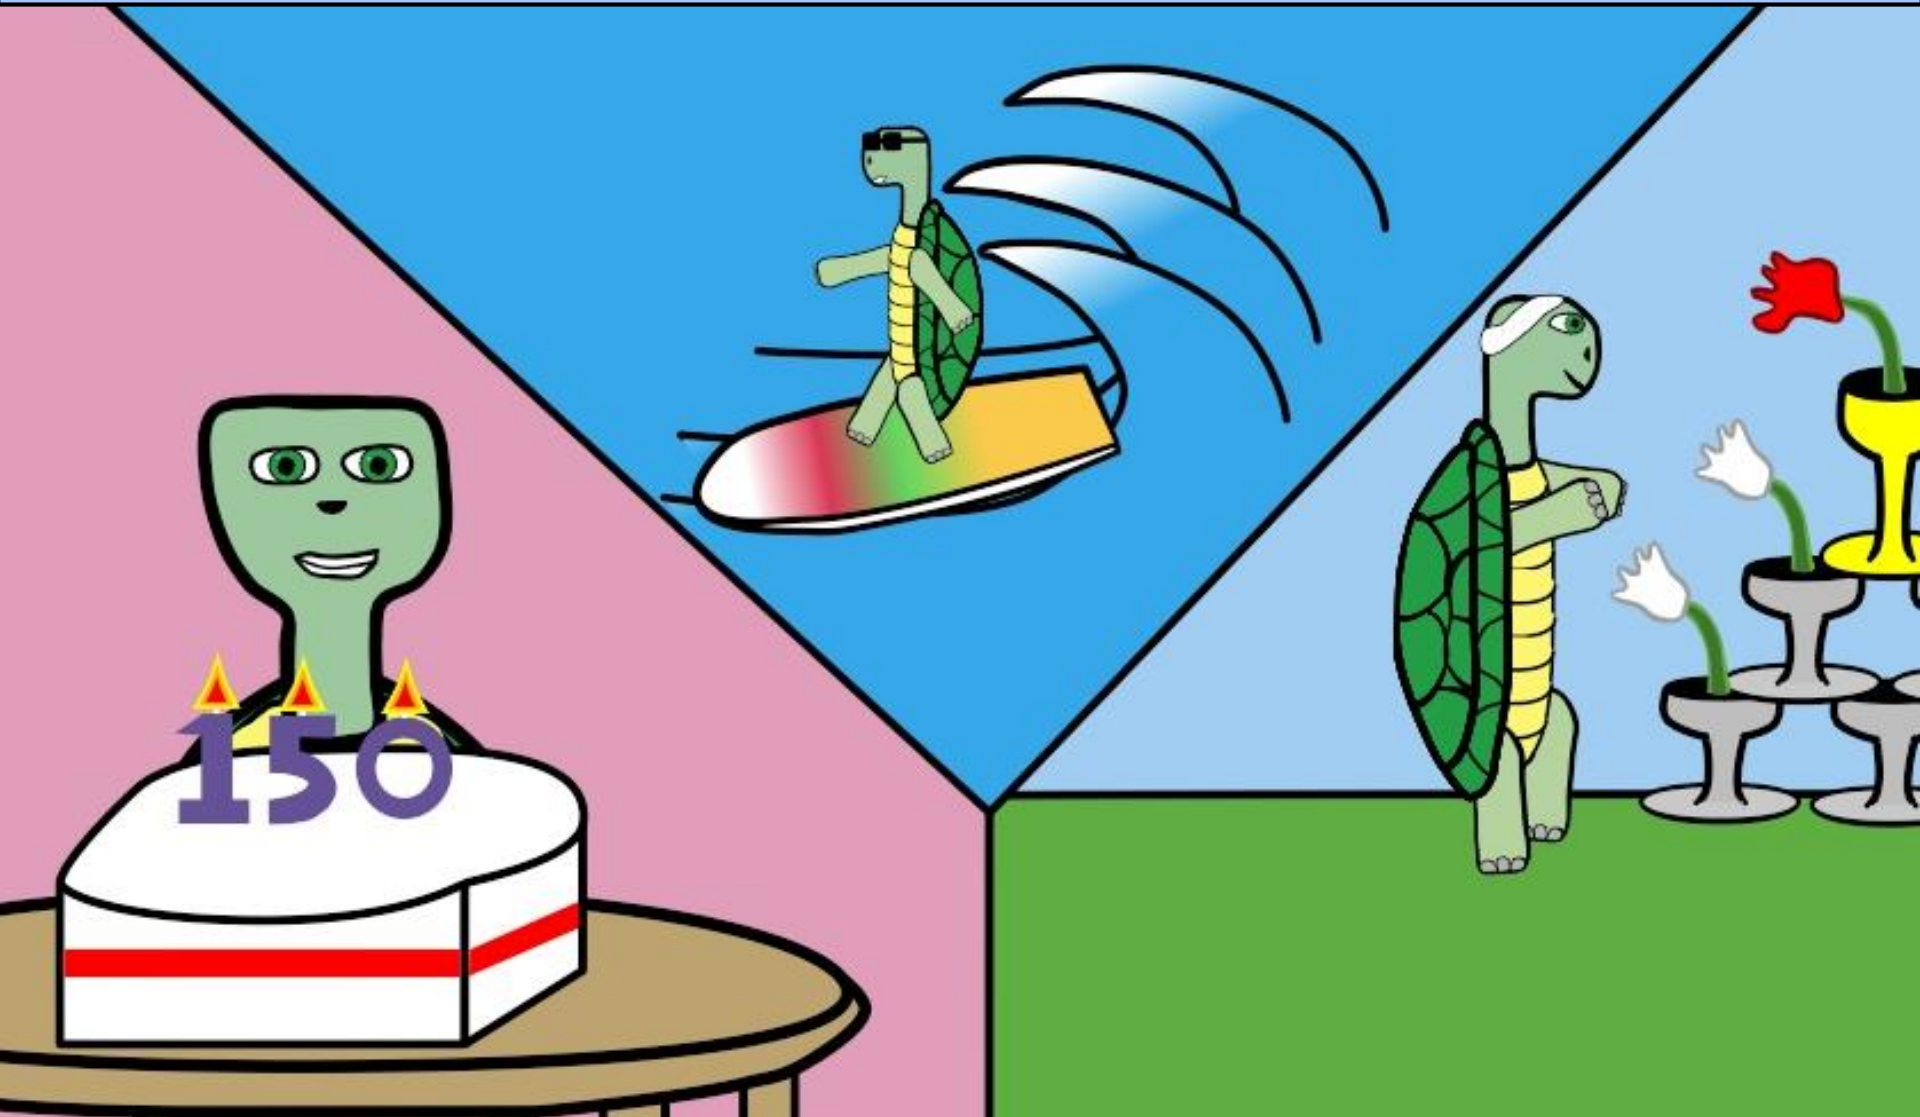

While Terry isn't as cute as Oliver the Otter, he doesn't need to worry about fading beauty.

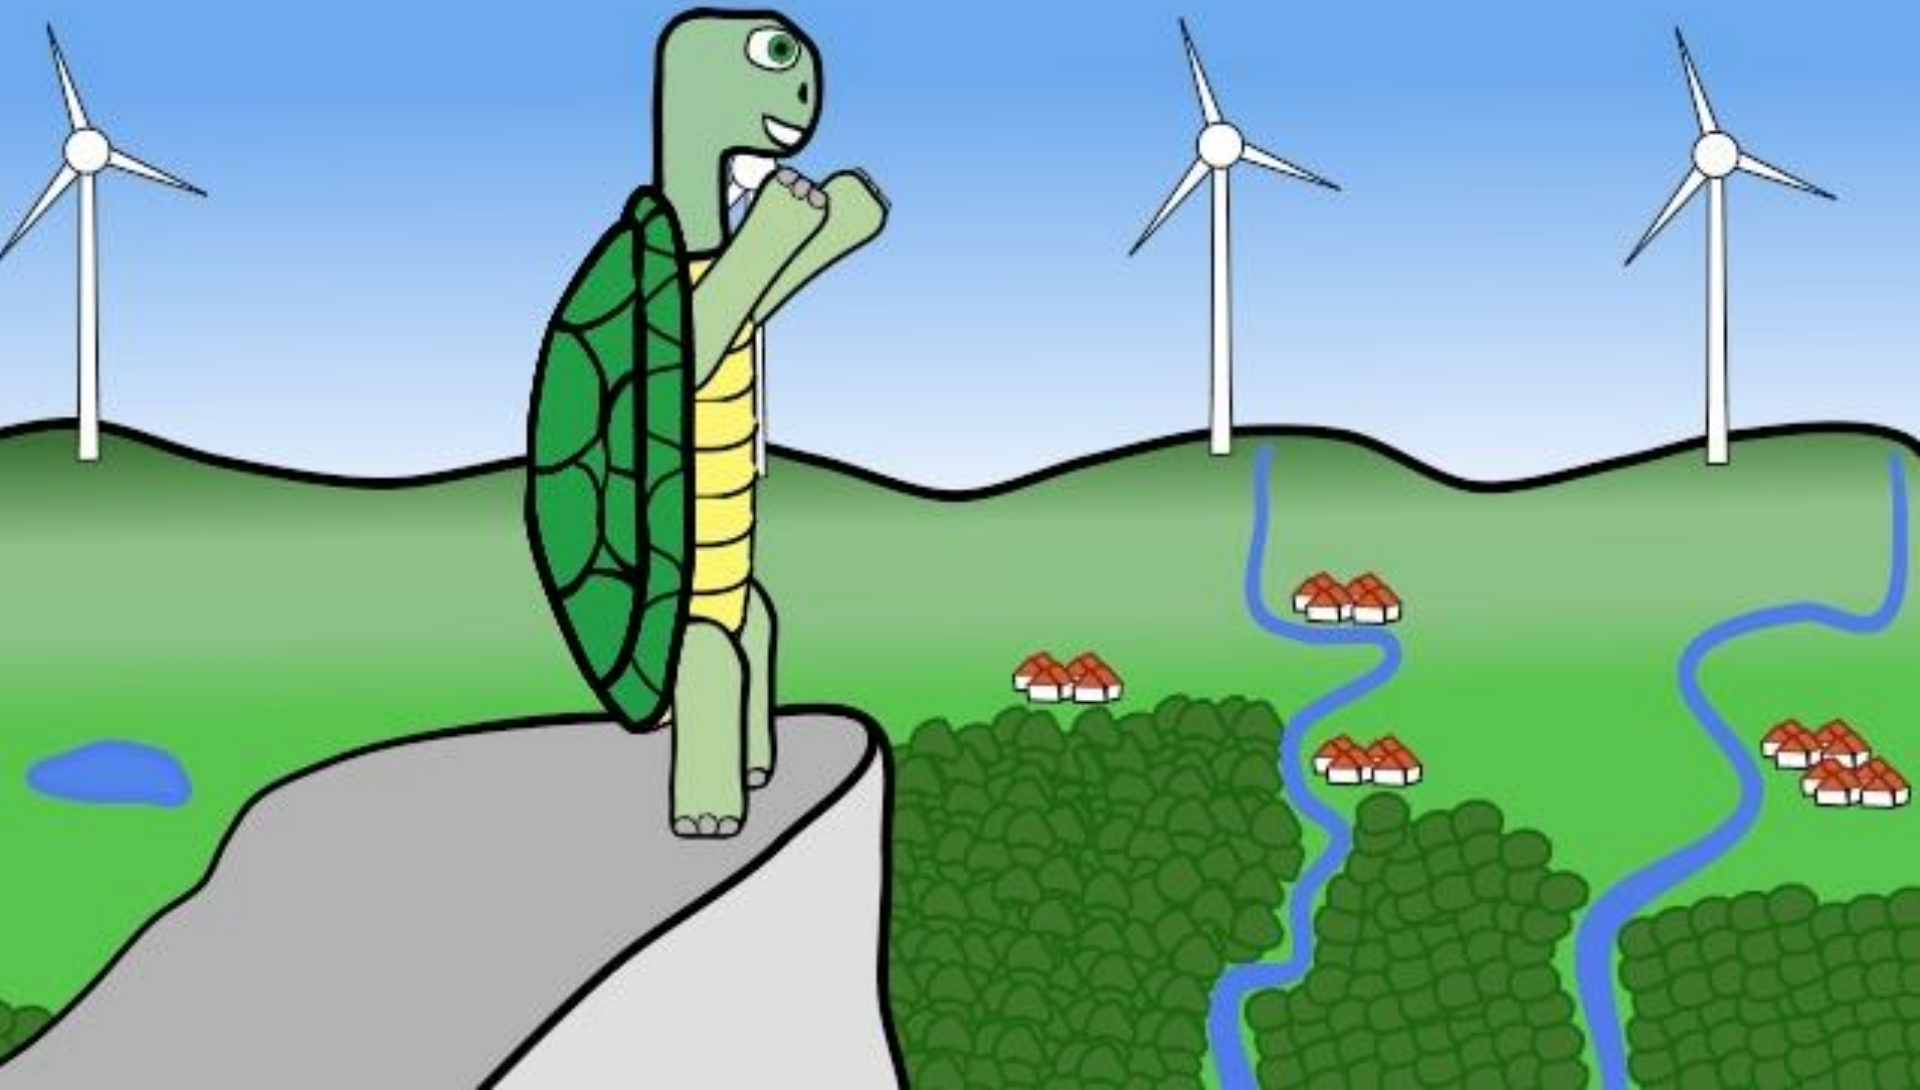

So you're thinking, what game has Terry played and won?

The most important race of all, living a long life. Not just existing, but living and fulfilling all of your hopes and dreams.

Everyday, Terry prepares and he prospers.

The End