

Xavier the Xenopus

Written and Illustrated by Daniel Rodrigues

In the vast desert, Xavier the Xenopus is slowly hopping away, looking for some water.

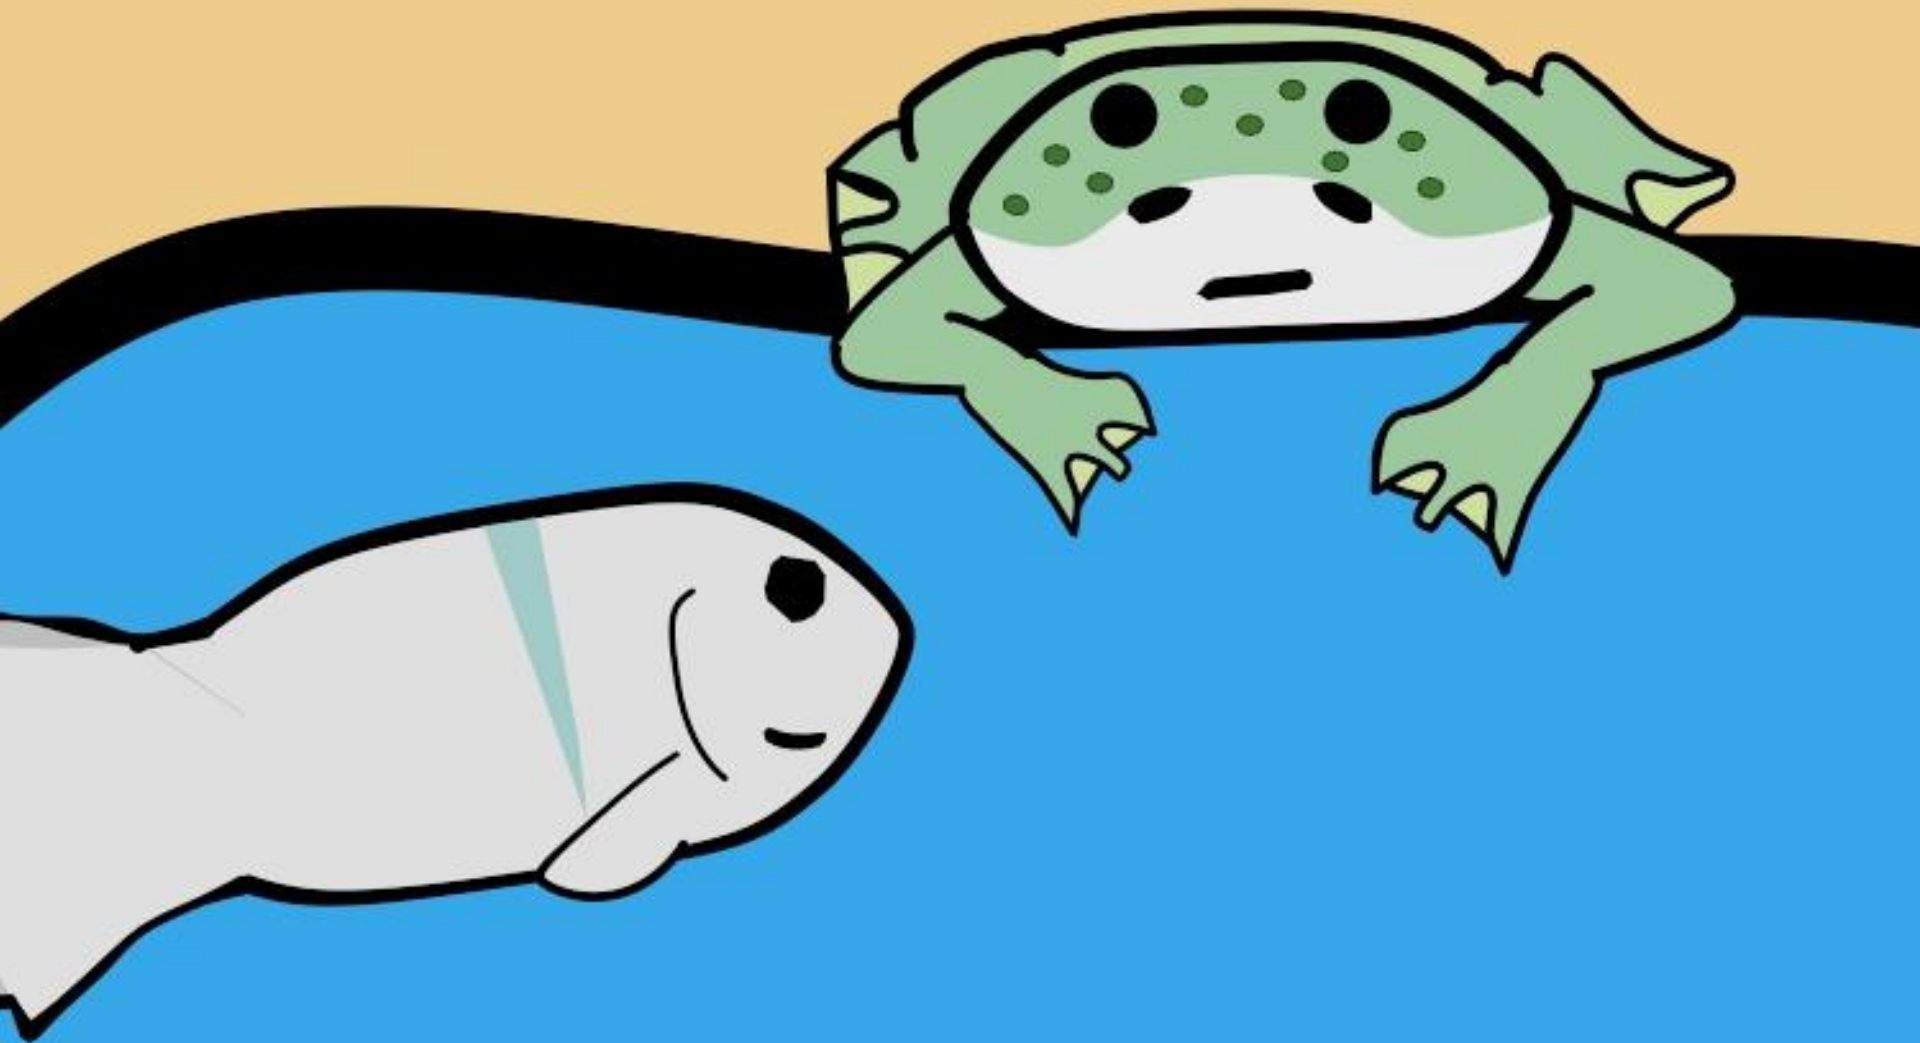

In the distance, Xavier sees an oasis and he starts to hop towards it.

Once Xavier reaches the oasis, he is able to get a drink and think about his next move.

“Hello there” says Xenon the Xantic Sango.
“Can you help me get to the sea?”

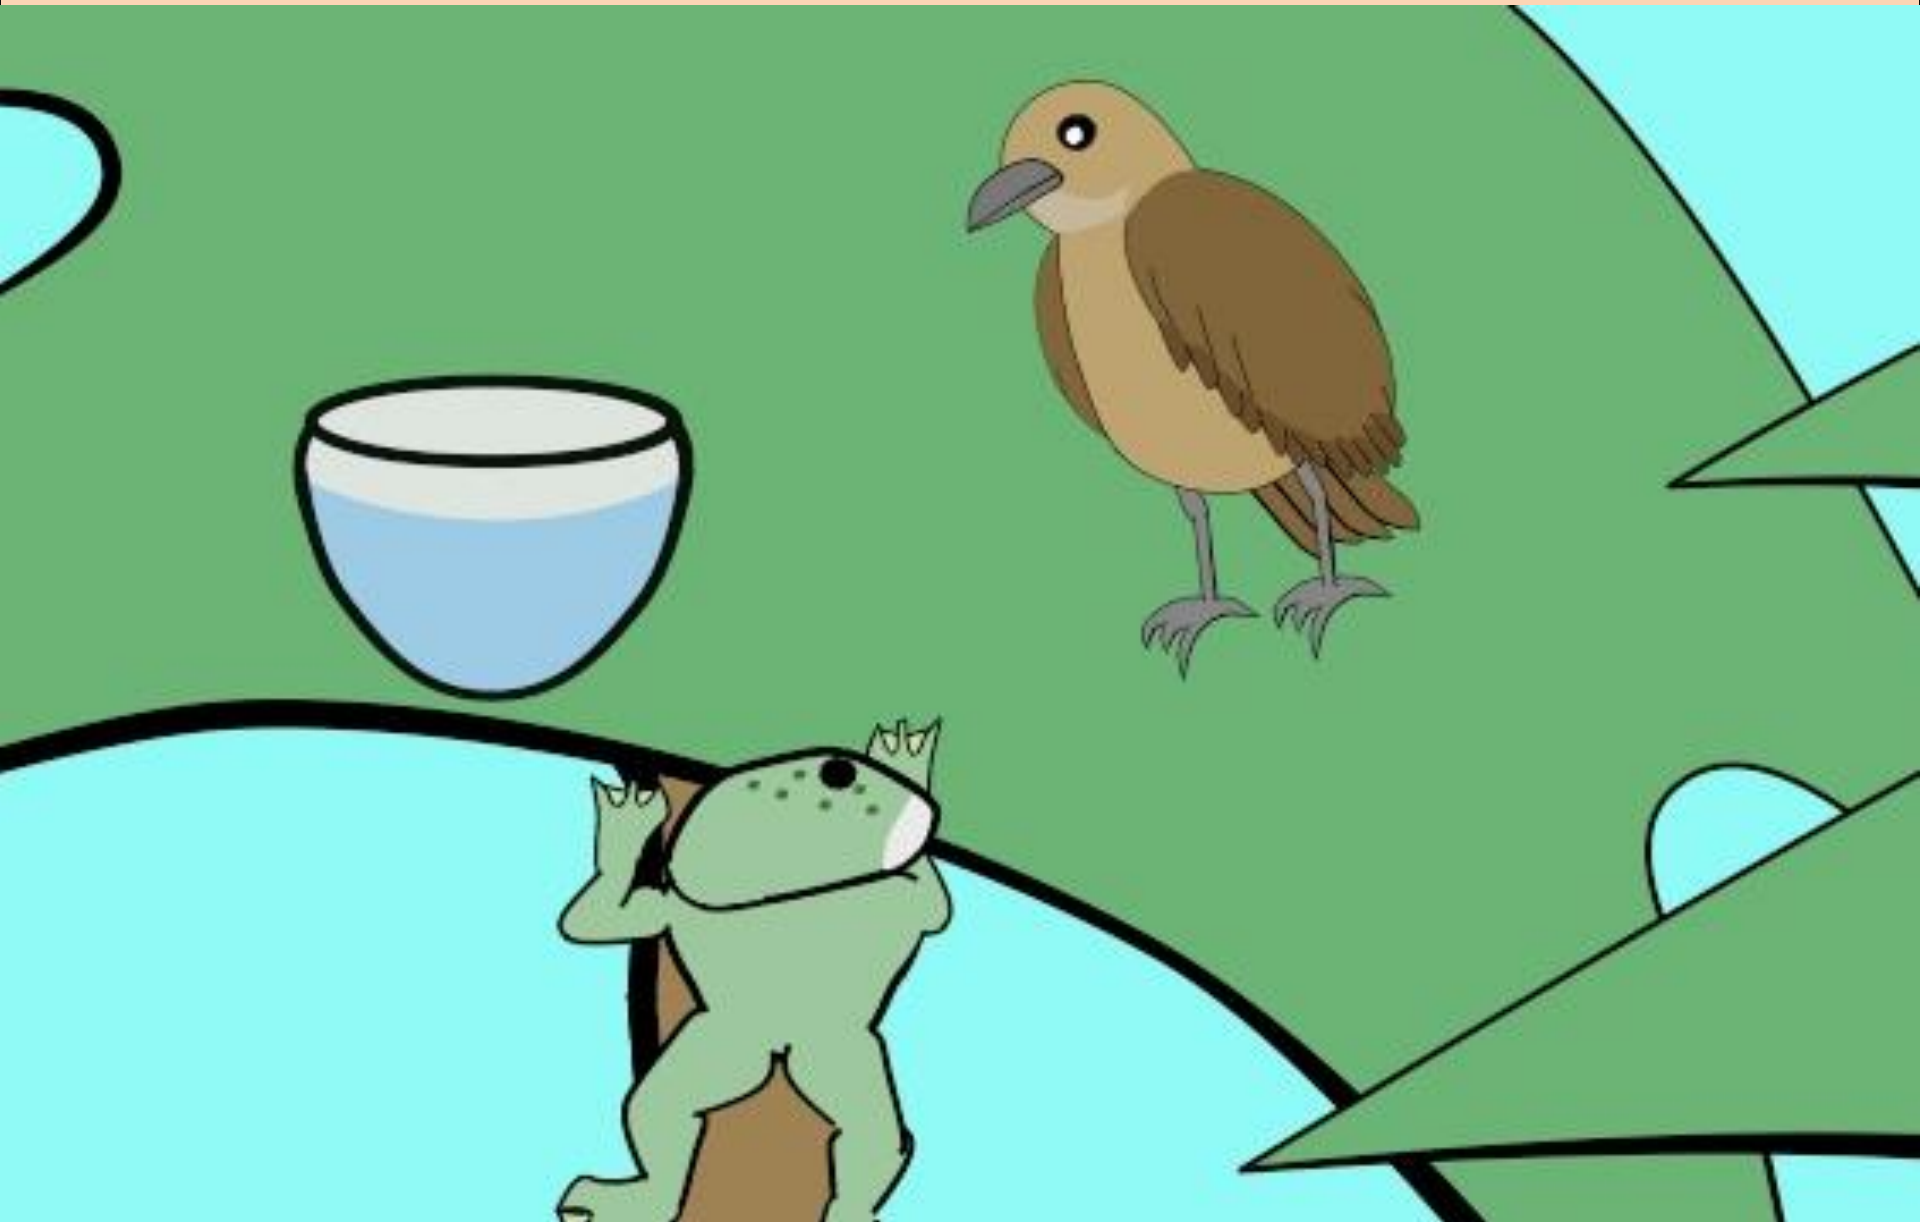

“I don’t know how to get to the sea” replied Xavier.
“I'd like to help and let you be free.”

“There is a bowl and some water under the tallest tree. Go there and collect it, so I’ll be free.” said Xenon.

Xavier found the bowl under the tallest tree. This is where he came across another creature.

“Hello there, listen to me sing. If you listen now, there will be one wish that I will bring you.” said Xena the Xenop.

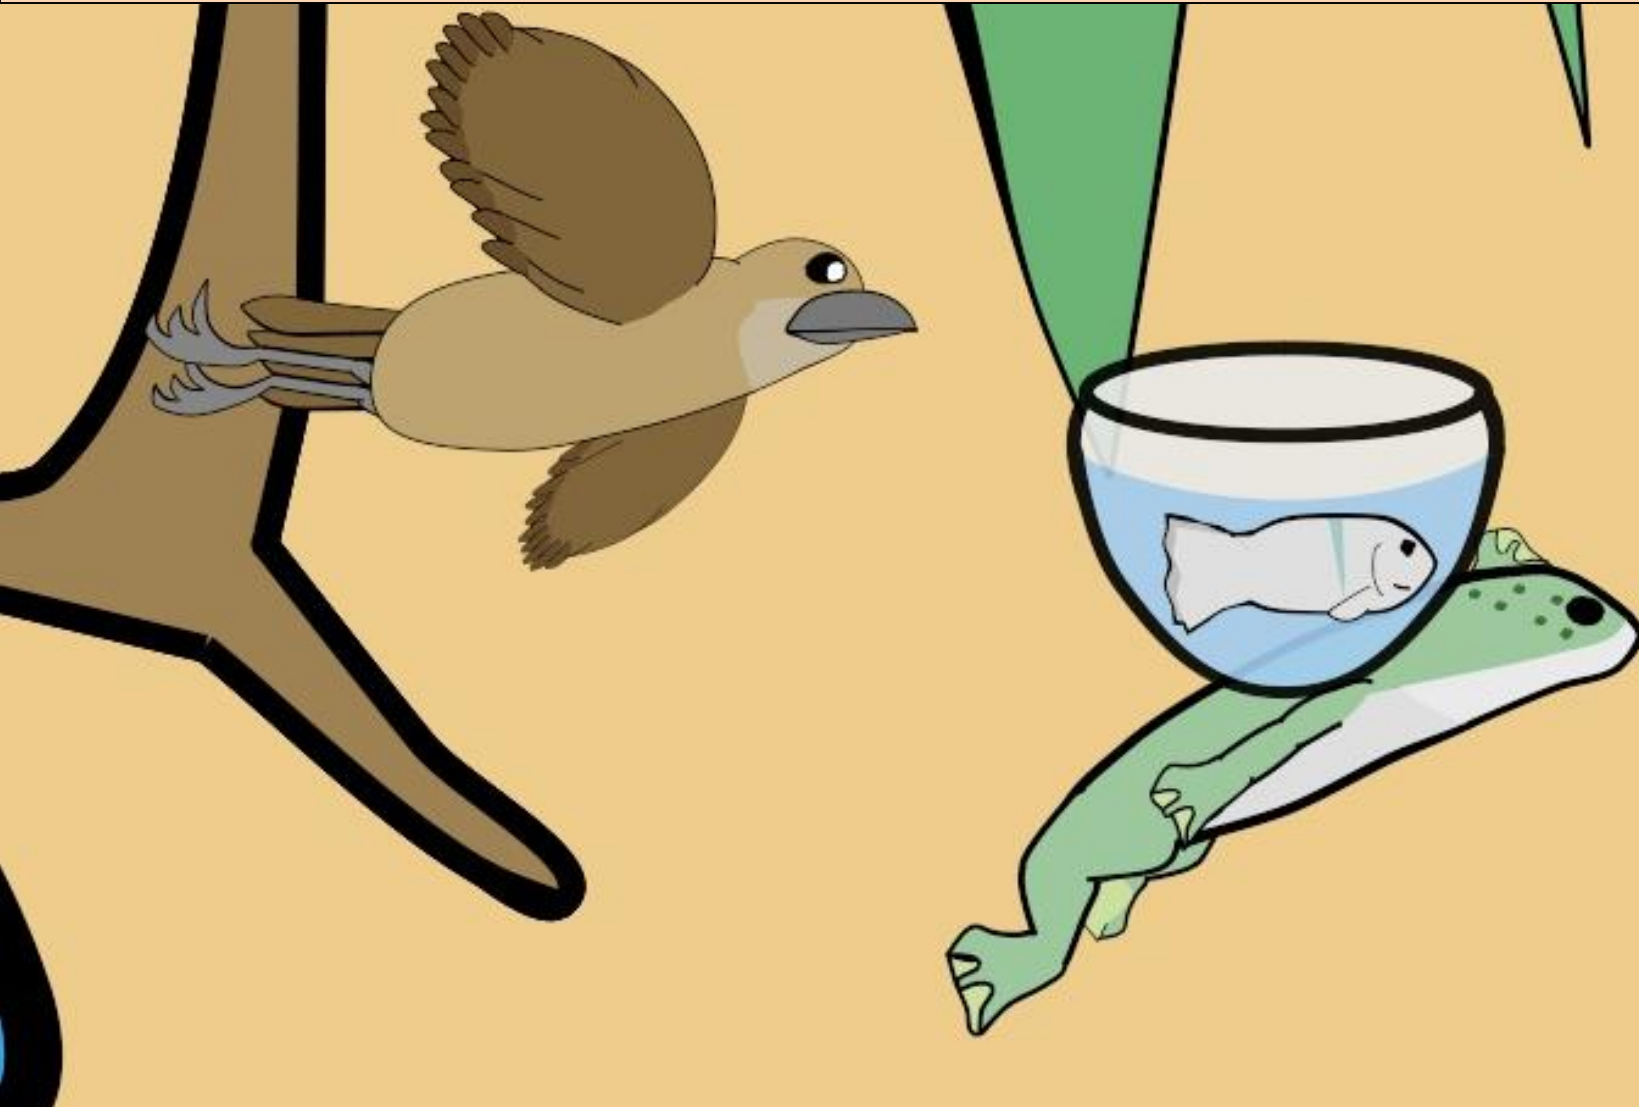

Xavier listened to the sweetest tune and he made a wish to leave the sand dunes.

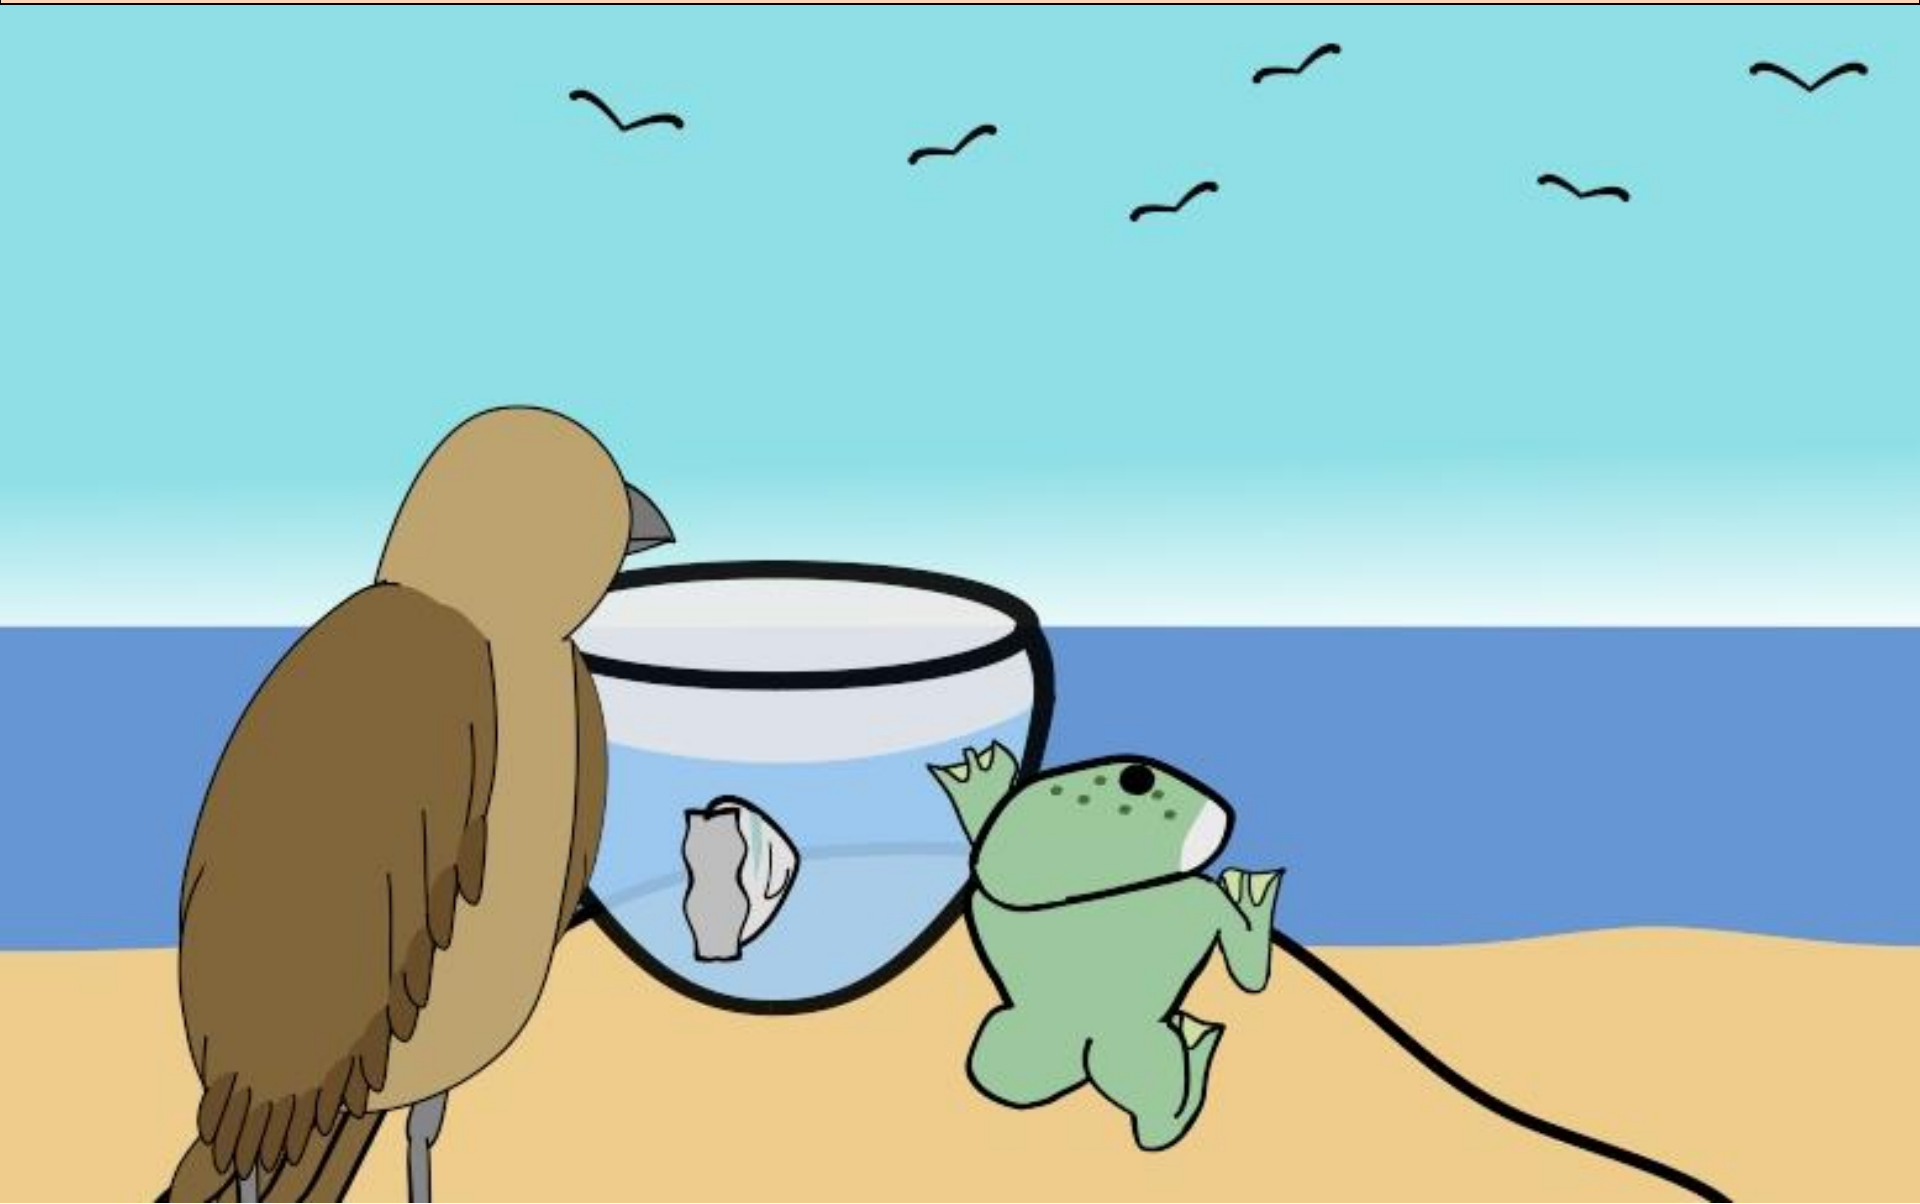

Xena would be able to grant Xavier his wish.

Xena knew where the sea is. She navigated for a week. After the final peak, the sea could be seen.

The three creatures reached the sea.

Xavier freed Xenon, while Xena continued to sing.

A xylophone appears and Xavier starts to play, Xenon splashes a beat and a band plays in harmony.

The End
